CITIZEN

Matteo ANSELMINO

After a Scientific Diploma and Medical School graduation with full remarks and laude he specialised in Cardiology in 2007.

His clinical commitment towards arrhythmias brought him to be progressively involved in both clinical and invasive management of simple and complex arrhythmias. This has now, after more than ten years of practice, been consolidated in performing, as first operator, about 200 electrophysiology procedures per year.

On top of this, he has also actively participated to the scientific community and has gained experience by creating a personal research network. Since the start, his research topic was ductile, focusing on both arrhythmias (specialization thesis on “Pulmonary vein isolation for the treatment of atrial fibrillation achieved by an innovative high density Mesh catheter”) and clinical cardiology (PhD thesis “Diabetes mellitus and cardiovascular risk in patients with known coronary artery disease: risk assessment and impact of available treatments”), demonstrating his propensity to multidisciplinary, referral towards team members belonging to different clinical fields, and to actively interchange ideas and experiences.

In the following years he has confirmed his skills by taking direct responsibility in tutoring Medical students aiming to defend their graduation and post graduate (specialization in Cardiology) thesis. The research network previously created permitted him to achieve several national grants, and to be involved, also as principal investigator, in international randomized clinical trials. As documented by recent publications, in addition, he has proposed and coordinated numerous research projects involving international eminent academic and clinical centres and involving colleagues with different cultural background (e.g. Bioengineers).

His scientific activity, in conclusion, is attested by more than one-hundred-twenty publications on indexed Journals (about 50% of which as first or last author, more than 1900 citations, h-index 23).
